Our Boys and Girls.

The good women of the present are beginning to take some account of the dark side of society Heretofore it was not thought a fit subject for them to know about, much less to think and talk about But, womanlike, they are strongly inclined to lay the blame on those of their own sex However, they will have to learn to judge who is most at fault

Mothers have always been urged to look well to their daughters, and if possible keep them in ignorance of what is going on in the world, just as if a girl possessed of good sense and a reasonable amount of womanly curiosity will not find out more or less of it and still appear to be ignorant

Were mothers to give a little more attention to their boys and show more respect for the intelligence and good sense of their girls, the results would be much better

Possibly the coming woman will be able to grapple more successfully with this matter than the woman of the present —Cincinnati Commercial Gazette

A Woman Sexton.

Many women in New York have mastered the art of embalming and are employed as undertakers' assistants in much the same way as a doctor calls on the services of a nurse There are several women undertakers who sell coffins, provide shrouds and attend to other details of their gloomy calling These last are not necessarily embalmers and are in most instances the widows of undertakers carrying on the business which their husbands established They assume charge of a dead body and prepare it for burial, but invariably call on some friendly man undertaker to conduct the funeral and ostensibly appear in charge Brooklyn boasts a woman who is not only an undertaker, but the sexton of a church as well successfully discharging all the duties that pertain to both callings, except the personal conduct of a public funeral —New York Tribune

Woman's Influence.

Men are not apt to indulge in rowdyism in the presence of women whom they respect, and there was some force in the argument for woman suffrage made by a member of one of the Canadian legislatures a few years ago An opponent suggested the horrible possibility that if women had the parliamentary vote some women might be elected to the provincial legislature. Another member retorted that this might prove an advantage since if there were ladies present the honorable gentlemen would probably cease to amuse themselves by throwing rubber overshoes at one another's heads

The recent pulling of beards in the Nebraska senate is another illustration in point No doubt there is plenty of human nature in women, but it looks as if there were a good deal in men too —Woman's Journal

Decided Against the Woman.

In Florence, Or, at the municipal election in March, an entire woman's ticket was elected As soon as the result was known a question of the constitutionality of the election came up, and it was decided that the women could not hold office except by courtesy The matter was left to the old city council, which has decided against the women The council will appoint men in their places The terms of the old officers have expired, and those elected having failed to qualify the town is without a government This is an interference not only with the right of women to serve, but primarily with the right of men to elect whom they choose to serve them A South Carolina judge long ago decided that if there was no law expressedly forbidding a woman to hold an office she could do so —Woman

Progressive Maori Women.

The newest of "new women" are to be found at Hawes Bay, New Zealand, where a parliament of Maori women has just been sitting The parliament passed resolutions to have nothing further to do with the native lands court, to cease selling lands and to have no further renting or surveying of lands The chairwoman, in bringing the meeting to a close, said

"We find, after many years, men's endeavors to carry out our interests have failed, and therefore we women have formed a parliament or committee of our own, and we are going to do what we can Our lands are slipping away from us into the hands of the government, and therefore we must protect ours"

Duly Appreciated.

Miss Fannie Nesbitt, night operator at the Union Pacific station in North Topeka, has been presented with a gold medal by her fellow operators on the road for the heroism she displayed at Bonner Springs last fall, when a robber attempted to rand her office Miss Nesbitt fought the robber off with a revolver and saved express packages containing $1,200 in cash

Well Named.

The "Six of One and Half a Dozen of the Other" club is reported to be the latest addition to the society organizations in Gardiner, Me It is a ladies' whist club, and the name is very appropriate, inasmuch as six of its members are maidens and six are matrons.

GOLDBUG ADVICE.

It is a little remarkable that the gold men in both the old political parties are averse to any independent movement in favor of free coinage. The party bosses proclaim that the question must be settled within old party lines. They want the people to continue in the path which they, the bosses, mark out for them, and let Republicans and Democrats alternate in running the Government, each promising while out of office to settle the financial question satisfactorily to the people when restored to power, but placing every possible obstruction in the way of its settlement when in power, by combining, as they did at the last and several preceding sessions of Congress, to prevent any legislation favorable to silver.

When the silver movement was inaugurated in Nevada place-hunting Republicans and Democrats, who pretended to detest each other's political principles, appealed to voters who manifested a disposition to throw off party shackles and join the independent movement, to stay with the old parties and when moral suasion failed resorted to coercive and proscriptive measures to intimidate voters.

The same tactics are now used in the East. Republican newspapers, which have been attributing the commercial and industrial depression to Cleveland's Administration, are now warning the Free Silver Democrats that their course, if pursued, will lead to the disruption of the party and there are avowed Democratic papers which give the same advice to Free Silver Republicans. One would naturally suppose that each party would rejoice at the ruin of the other and would encourage it in doing what would result in disintegration, but such is not the fact. The leaders, like Buckley and Higgins, the Democratic and Republican manipulators, who divided the spoils in San Francisco when boss rule prevailed in that city, do all in their power to maintain the old party organizations intact, with the understanding that they will combine, whenever it becomes necessary, in Congress to prevent any legislation favorable to silver.

It seems strange that anybody should be deceived by such tactics. If Republican leaders believe it would be for the best interests of the country to have Clevelandism wiped out of politics, why do they advise Democrats to support Cleveland's financial policy? and if Cleveland's Cuckoos are sincere in their opposition to Republicanism, why counsel the independents in that party to adhere to Sherman's single standard ideas? The plain truth is the gold men of both the old parties fear the silver men, and misrepresent their views and principles on every occasion, hoping thereby to prevent the independent voters from joining them in the fight against the gold trust.

SILVER IN CHICAGO.

The Chicago Record, the leading paper of the most enterprising city in the United States, treats the silver question fairly, and in that respect differs very materially from nearly all the large city papers. With a view of ascertaining the sentiment of the voters of Chicago on the financial problem it furnishes ballots to all the voters in Chicago whose names appear on the poll lists of the last election, to vote on the question.

"Shall the United States open its mints at once to the free coinage of silver, without regard to other nations, and at a ratio of 16 to 1?"

The polls have not yet closed, but, so far, the vote stands nearly three to one for free silver. For a few days the gold standard men were ahead in the Thirty-second Ward but the Record of last Wednesday shows that every one of the thirty-four wards in the city has a majority for free coinage.

To insure a fair count, the votes are canvassed by a committee composed of representative free coinage and gold standard men, and ballots not signed by the voter and bearing his full name and address, are not counted. The poll shows that public sentiment in Chicago is strongly in favor of silver and that in the battle of standards, unless the issue is obscured by the political manipulators, so as to deceive the unwary, the free coinage men will be victorious.

BLANKS are prepared at the Treasury Department for the use of persons who have claims against the Government for the refunding of the income tax. The refund will be made under Section 2,220 of the Revised Statutes, which authorizes the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, on appeal, to refund all taxes erroneously or illegally collected. Few claims as yet have been filed, probably because the claimants have been waiting for official information on the subject. Every dollar of the income tax already collected will be paid to the persons from whom the collections were made.

The war between the Colorado cattle and sheep men is over for the present. The cattle men found only about 2,000 sheep where they expected to find 50,000. The Government may interfere as the cattle men are fencing large tracts of public land, and if necessary troops will be sent to remove the fences.

The sales of wool in the Boston market since January 1, 1895, amount to 69,864,450 pounds against 64,413,400 pounds for the corresponding period of 1894.

THE FAIR ESTATE.

A New Move to be Made Shortly.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—A new move will be shortly made in the litigation over the estate of James G. Fair. Chas. L. Fair will file an action against the four special administrators to determine the validity of the trust created by the late Senator in his will, believed to have been stolen from the County Clerk's office. This proceeding will be taken without the previous process of probating the will under an act of the last Legislature. By this means Charles Fair expects to get at the special provisions of the will without having the whole admittted to probate. The will itself may be introduced in evidence, under this law, before the Probate Court has passed on its validity. If the Court should decide that the trust created by Fair in giving the executors absolute control of the estate for life invalid, but other provisions of the will valid, then the contest will be ended, the heirs inheriting the estate just as under the second or holographic will and the obnoxious trust be ended, but if the Court sustain the trust, the contest between the two wills can proceed as before.

A Detective Convicted.

NEW YORK, June 8.—William M. McLaughlin, late an Inspector of Police and Chief of the Detective Bureau, spent last night in the Toombs, a convict. He was pale and nervous and appeared in a state of collapse. He walked up and down his cell through the small hours, having no inclination to rest nor to go to bed. To-day he declined to see reporters. It is believed by his friends that he will never serve a day in a penal prison.

CAPITAL NOTES.

Mint Drops—Heney Notes and Pictures—Prickler Sauce—The Popular Bicycle.

[Correspondence of the Journal.]

CARSON CITY, June 8, 1895.

It turns out that U. S. District Attorney Jones was wrongly informed relative to the arrest of the man at Wickensburg, Arizona, for Heney. He unfortunately resembled the hard looking wood cuts in the newspapers, purporting to be Heney, and was somewhat of a stranger in the town, but he succeeded after a while in finding somebody who knew him and he proved an alabi, so he was honorably acquitted. And the keen-eyed U. S. Secret Service detective wasn't to blame either; those slanderous pictures would deceive most anybody.

The declination of the proposal on the part of Heney to come back from Leadville, Colorado, and surrender himself to the United States officials if allowed to do so with bonds fixed at $5,000, puzzles most people who thought Heney was wanted by the prosecution. But that can be explained on the hypothesis that detectives have him already arrested, or nearly so, and it is desirable to make no terms with him—merely unconditional surrender. Mr. Heney still continues to be the "coming man," the Messiah, so to speak, whose coming can alone solve the deep problem of the Carson Mint shortage.

Nothing new is developed in the Fickler case, beyond what was expected. He and Flo Stewart have made up and they are living together as before, and although she is the principal witness against him, she will probably do him as little harm as she can at the examination—if she appears at all. Anyhow no more bullion has been produced from about his premises. If he had any more planted in his barn, he has been given ample opportunity to dig it up and take care of it.

The number of bicycles appearing on the streets increase every day, and a dozen or two at a time can generally be seen silently speeding in various directions. Many excellent riders are among the young ladies, and all dress very tastefully in bloomers or otherwise. In the old early California days it was common enough to see reckless horsemen, cow boys, etc., ride right into saloons if they saw fit, and now it is common enough to see a young lady riding along the street or sidewalk, turn her bicycle into a grocery or a dry goods store. Even preachers of the gospel here ride the wheels very elegantly.

ALF DOTEN.

The Kennedy Shooting Affray.

The Silver State has the following particulars of the shooting affray at Kennedy. The principals were C. H. McIntosh, who has a store in Kennedy, and Thomas Jenkins, watchman at the Jenkins mill. Nine shots in all were fired. McIntosh was shot once in the right breast, the ball remaining in his body. Jenkins received two flesh wounds in the left arm below the elbow, while a bullet from McIntosh's pistol passed through the left leg on his (Jenkins') trousers and also one through the left sleeve of his shirt neither inflicting a scratch.

It was feared that McIntosh was fatally wounded, but as there was no physician at Kennedy the reports of the injury may have been in doubt. McIntosh is a promising young business man and has a store at Kennedy, and Jenkins is a nephew of W. T. Jenkins, the sheepman and owner of a mill at Kennedy. The first report that W. T. Jenkins, the owner of the mill, shot McIntosh is erroneous.

School Books.

The Board of Regents of the State University at a recent meeting authorized the Faculty to make arrangements to furnish text books to the students at cost. The school trustees will probably arrange for a depository for school books in town, where such books can be purchased at cost or a slight advance above actual cost.

SILVER RIBBON DAY.

C. Becker's Brewing Company Introduce Their New Lager With a Whoop Up.

Promptly at 2 o'clock yesterday the formation of the procession began at C. Becker's Brewery, and in a few moments Grand Marshal Correcco gave the order to forward. A large crowd had gathered on North Sierra street to view the start and other main streets were lined with spectators in holiday attire. The procession was formed in the order published in yesterday morning's JOURNAL, and proceeded south on Sierra street to Second. It then moved west on Second and north on Ralston to Fourth and thence east to Lake, to Plaza, down Commercial Row to Virginia, where a halt was made and the attendants gave every one an opportunity to sample the beer from of the big vat. The wagons were elaborately decorated and the parade was quite an imposing display. Hasting's band of twelve pieces furnished excellent music and as was announced a few days ago in the JOURNAL, created a sensation by appearing on wheels, and what is more remarkable, it is the first time in the world's history that a brass band appeared on wheels at the head of a procession introducing, what is to be a celebrated brand of lager beer, and going over the entire line of march, which took about two hours and a half, without having wheels in their heads. The boys wound up as straight as if they had been playing at a camp meeting. Silver Ribbon beer flowed like water and it is creditable to Mr. Becker's management that the parade was orderly, and the fact that there were very few loaded individuals speaks highly for the quality of the beer being a healthful and delightful beverage without the accompaniament of a headache. Give Casper a chance and he will have a plant in Reno that will give employment to seventy-five peopl within a year.

PARITY.

Farmer's Plain Definition of its Meaning in Connection With Finance.

ED. JOURNAL:—A prominent citizen of Reno wishes "Farmer" to give a plain explanation of "parity," as used in connection with the money clause of the Democratic and Republican platforms. He also wishes him to state what he considers the best and most effective way of keeping the money of the United States at a parity.

Answer.—The agents of the absorbers in their attempt to mystify the people on financial affairs, are using the words parity, intercouvertibility and interchangeability in a very loose and ambiguous manner. They claim that the only way you can keep gold, silver and paper at a parity is to make them interchangeable, and in order to do this they assert that it is necessary to keep a large gold reserve on hand and be ready to exchange the gold for any kind of money that is presented.

Mr. Editor, these agents of the absorbers are in politics for revenue only; and what they assert should not be very seriously considered. As long as the absorbers are allowed to write and enforce the gold clause in contracts, just so long will the difficulty of keeping Uncle Sam's money at an imaginary parity increase. But just as soon as the absorbers are prevented by the strong arm of the Government from discriminating against any kind of Uncle Sam's money, then we will have a practical, just and genuine parity of money, and that without the aid of one dollar of gold reserve. SINGING AS TAUGHT IN WASHINGTON.

What a Nevada Teacher thinks of the Methods.

It is conceded by the musical critics of the East, who have examined the work done in singing in Washington schools, that the methods, theories and results developed during the last five years are superior to those of any schools in the country.

It may be of interest to those making a study of such work, to trace the progress made in this new system of vocal instruction, which was adopted or rather begun as an experiment some five years ago in the city of Washington, and which has resulted in a declaration by the first educators of the land, that "the children of the District of Columbia are now taught music better, more beneficially and more thoroughly than anywhere else in the country."

This result has been reached only after much hard labor and united efforts on the part of the teachers,

Some five years ago Mr. Powell, Superintendent of the city schools, begun to examine into the methods of teaching singing and decided that there was something radically wrong. Although he could not at first discover wherein lay the great evil, he continued to watch and think. About that time a Miss Annie Schammell, a graduate of the Normal School of Washington, attracted the attention of Mr. Powell by the superior methods she used in teaching singing in her grade of school work. So she was selected Superintendent of Singing in all the schools of the city. From that time on both she and Mr. Powell had but one aim in view, and that was to establish a new system of vocal culture.

It might be well to quote Miss Shammell as to the condition the schools were in when she took charge, and how she begun her work.

"When I took charge of a grade school I saw that the then existing method of teaching singing regarded volume as of first importance and that no attention was paid to the quality of the tones or the management of the voices. I could see that the little ones were having their throats strained, and I fear that a tremendous number of voices must have been ruined, voices that were even promising. The general mass of the pupils had their tastes vitiated, all being sacrificed to quantity of sound There was no culture in their work.

"The notion was that the child who sang lustily must enjoy the music, and this was pretty nearly the end of it all. Too much attention was paid to the beating of time, which had become a most mechanical process. I found that the majority of children did not know how to read music, and, indeed, the whole subject was being taught as it had been for fifty years, while it was only too apparent that outside of the schools the methods of musical instruction had advanced marvelously at that period.

"I saw that there was a great deal of volume being produced, making a satisfactory effect as far as quantity was concerned, but I knew that the natural voice of the child was small, and that this great volume must be unnatural. There was, therefore, a strain somewhere, and I knew that no singing is right or good that is not produced without strain. So I went to work, in my own school, and for four years I strove to reduce the quantity of the sound, while trying to improve the tone.

"The first year that I began teaching exclusively, I had one assistant, Miss Bentley, and our chief labor was the softening down of all the voices. We had the five lower grades, and we started in to make them sing more softly. It was difficult to show the child that music does not mean noise, and that the singing hour need not be marked by screaming that could be heard all over the building.

"I reduced the tone so that the children could sing much more than before, and so we used their strength in other and more vital directions. I began in that year to introduce the study of the intervals, which had been practically neglected. That, of course, was the chief reason why the child could not read music. Reading involves two elements, time and intervals, and these had never been separated. I first took up the intervals, and believing that they could be taught objectively, just as numbers and geography are taught, I adopted the system of hand symbols that has been in use spasmodically in different parts of the country at various times but never here.

"These hand signs have the double function of marking the various notes and giving to each a distinct character. Thus, the hand closed, the clenched fist, is 'do,' the first note, the dominant quality, and thus the foundation. It means a strong, firm tone. Then the open palm, slightly raised, signifies 're,' the second note, and means a rising or hopeful tone. Next is 'me,' a middle, sustaining note, which has a steady, calm tone, and is indicated by the open palm resting horizontally. 'Fa' is a mournful note, and so marks the chord in which it dominates, so the symbol for it is a drooping finger, which signifies a desolate or awe-inspiring tone. 'Sol,' the great middle tone, belonging to both of the great chords, is an open palm held vertically and its character is expressed by the phrase 'the grand or bright tone.' Again, 'la' is another mournful note, and is expressed by a drooping palm, and is called a sad or weeping tone, being the basis of the minor keys. 'Si,' being the next to the highest, is naturally shrill, and so is shown by the uplifted finger. It is called the piercing or sensative tone.

"Thus we gave to each note its own character, and had the children study them. With the symbols we could teach intervals, and we worked back and forth and drilled and practiced until we had overcome some of the old faults. The children had been taught chords until they were in ruts, and when called upon to jump with their voices from 'do' to 'si' or from 'me' to 'la' or to make any unusual intervals, they were nonplused. I laid down the rule that a child is not taught an interval until it can sing it when it has been preceded by any other interval, and can sing any other after it. Then, and only then, does the voice become sufficiently flexible to follow the eye when reading.

"With an encouraging amount of success the first year, we followed up the interval teaching the second season and made an arbitrary division of the intervals, so as to insure perfect system of work in each school, and not allow any one teacher to adopt her own plan, that would get her own school into more ruts. This division made two groups of the intervals, the notes do, ra, me and fa being in the first and sol, la, si and do in the second. After the children had made every possible combination in each group all they had to do was to combine the groups and they had been given thorough practice with every jump and interval of which the scale is possible.

"Please remember that during this time we were doing the same kind of work in all the lower grades, and that the children were on the same basis. We had discarded the old hooks, and were tearing down the old foundations. The second year we had made some more innovations, stopped beating time for instance, in the old mechanical way, and used a pendulum, which is the simplest form of metronome. The children watched the swinging ball and so gradually absorbed the notion that there are two elements in rhyme, that is, regular recurrence and accent.

Then it occurred to me that the only way to teach sight reading to the little ones was to have them read new music at each lesson instead of doing the same song over and over again.

"But meantime we had not deprived the children of the pure pleasure of singing songs, but had adopted the plan of giving them a few rote songs that would make the lessons more interesting and would teach them the spontaniety and joy of song. So we picked out some simple airs and gave them to the little ones, songs about birds and flowers and spring and the other seasons—nature songs they might be called, most of them from the German. Indeed, I should have been lost without the beautiful melodies of German music. These songs were given to the schools, as I say, and the children learned them by rote, and oh, how they do sing them, even yet, with their soft, pretty voices, and their sweet faces looking as if they enjoyed every note. This was the desert of the feast. We keep these rote songs as a part of the system now in the first three grades.

"After two years the children began to read fluently and we returned then to the old singing books and took up the songs that formerly were drilled into them by sheer force of lung power. There was a great difference in the results I can assure you, and as we have gone on, making a little advance each year and gradually spreading the system until each grade now has some pupils in it who have been instructed under the new plan, while the higher grades have pupils who have been drilled under both the new and the old. It will be four or five years yet before, every child in the entire public school system, from the first grade to the last year in the high school, has been taught only the present system. Up to now the work has been only foundation building, but now we have began to construct.

"Last year we worked on the lines that lead to quality in tone, and strove, oh, so hard, to ease the tension under which the children sang. We learned that lack of tension was the secret of natural, and therefore good singing. The perfect voice means perfect freedom though, of course, this equation is not reversible, as perfect freedom does not mean a perfect voice. But we must have the freedom of body and nerves if we are to have the perfect voice. So we try to get the children to sing in a perfectly easy attitude, we make them shrug their shoulders about until they are perfectly flexible, and if there is a frown on their brows we straighten that out. No one can sing well who is frowning. These are little things, but they go to the seat of all the trouble.

One of the greatest troubles at first was that the teachers themselves did not know how to teach music. Classes were established, and although the work was purely voluntary, the attendance was excellent.

At the present time Miss Scammell is Superintendent of the singing and has four assistants.

I think the most delightful and entertaining sessions that I have visited were the singing hours. Once a month the Superintendent or an assistant visits each room. The regular teacher has charge of the work and conducts the class. The Superintendent listens, criticises and reports her criticism to the teacher. I was visiting one day in a First Grade when an assistant was present. I thought it was marvelous, having never seen anything of the kind, to hear the pure, clear tones from those tiny throats. Every interval was given perfectly, and all sung by watching the movement of the teacher's hand, for the teacher does not sing with the pupils. The pendulum system of beating time is certainly superior. The children have but to use their eyes and pay strict attention. Any intervals in the scale were sung with the greatest ease, and during the whole lesson not a single mistake was made in singing the right interval.

I noted many entertaining features of the Washington schools, but the development of this new method of teaching singing proved most interesting to me.

Skinner, the photographer, has been kept busy this week making handsome pictures of the University graduates of the several classes of '95. An examination of the proofs by the JOURNAL man of the sittings so far had shows that the posing, light and excellence of the work fully demonstrates the assertion so frequently made that Mr. Skinners work is superior to that done in San Francisco, and there is no reason for the residents of Reno losing the opportunity offered or waiting until they visit the city to have work done.

Closing Exercises.

The closing exercises of the Fifth and Sixth Grades of the public school were held in the High School building Friday morning, and were greatly enjoyed by a large audience. The entire program was so excellent that it is impossible to mention any particular performance as the best. Each of the many girls and boys taking part showed commendable earnestness and pride in doing his or her part well. The musical part of the program, under the direction of Mrs. Layton, deserve special praise.

"I was severely afflicted with Salt Rheum three years ago, when I was in the English army. I was in one of Her Majesty's garrison hospitals, and as four physicians could not cure me, I was discharged, and as soon as I was able I came to this country. On the voyage over we had a rough storm, and by a sudden roll of the ship I received a blow on my forehead which broke the flesh in one of the old places over the right eye, where there had been several running sores. The new sore increased in size and I was in a bad condition when we arrived. It would often nearly heal over, but each time break out fresh again. THE MODERN SAFE.

AN UP TO DATE FIREPROOF AND BURGLAR PROOF DEPOSITORY.

Skillful Workmanship Displayed In Its Manufacture—Locks With Simple Mechanism That Are Extremely Hard to Open If You Don't Know How.

The latest burglar proof safes and vaults are magnificent specimens of skillful workmanship Although the doors often weigh tons, they swing as easily on their hinges as a window shutter After the first great door is thrown back and displays its glittering array of bright locks, its glass inclosed clocks and its smooth steel bolts there is another door almost as strong, with bolts and locks of its own When this is open it reveals three other doors The upper two are of thin steel and have no locks Only papers and books are to be kept in the little pockets or pigeonholes which they inclose

Under them and shutting in the cash drawer there is the third door with its own lock and bolts In this safe the size of the cash repository bears about the same relation to the size of the whole safe as a pumpkin seed does to the pumpkin And it is not only burglar proof but fireproof—warranted in fact, to stand for at least 75 hours the greatest amount of heat that any burning building could give it

The making of a safe of this kind is a complicated and expensive operation All the steel used comes in the form of plates from the works After having the necessary screw holes bored in them they are heated to a high temperature and then tempered by suddenly immersing them in water When they come out they are often a little twisted and warped, and have to be rolled cold and sometimes polished clean by a swiftly moving emery wheel The noise of this operation is ear splitting and so rasping that a man with ordinary nerves can hardly endure it When the plate is perfectly level it is transferred to another machine, where it is clamped tight, and an emery wheel shaves off the edges

The plates are now put together, first one of hard steel, then one of wrought iron or soft steel, and so on until the necessary thickness is obtained From the iron the safe receives its tenacious qualities—it cannot be cracked or broken as easily as steel, and the steel imparts a hardness that defies the burglar's drill The screws are also made of combined steel and iron Each of them is only long enough to reach through two plates and the screws which join the third, fourth and fifth plates to the first are never directly under any other screws, so that there is no chance for a burglar to bore down through a row of screws The plates are also drawn very close together, for if any space was left between them a safe blower might succeed in getting his dynamite into it

Between the interior and exterior walls of the safe a large amount of hydraulic cement, combined with other ingredients, usually according to a secret recipe, is packed solidly In case of fire the theory is that the water in the cement—about 43 per cent—will, owing to the heat of the outside covering, become steam, partially, at least, and be driven close to the inner wall Here it will remain and furnish a blanket impervious to heat All the bolts are cylindrical and from an inch up to two inches in diameter

Combination locks are now used exclusively The mechanism of most of them is extremely simple In one lock there are a number of round brass disks or 'tumblers,' each pivoted at the center on a small shaft which runs through the safe door and connects with the lock knob Each tumbler has a slit in it just the size of the steel arm which controls the bolts and reaching nearly back to the center When all these slits are together and pointing in exactly the same direction the arm slips into them and the bolts can be thrown 'But if the slit in a single one of the tumblers is even a thousandth of an inch out of line the arm will not slip back The disks are set a short distance apart and small screws with big heads are fastened at random over them As these strike together in turning the tumblers whirl, and a man might turn the lock knob a thousand years without once getting the slits in all the tumblers together But the man who knows just how far to turn one way and then how far back again according to the combination numbers has no trouble at all.

The combination and numbers are easily changed by changing the screws in the disk Many of the best safes and vaults are now being provided with time locks Two and sometimes three clocks are inclosed in glass cases just inside of the safe door When the door is locked, no one can open it again until the clock hands have traveled the set distance around the dial and touched a little trigger which releases the bolts. More than one clock is used, so that if one runs down the others will go on and perform their duty In the big banks the vaults are closed about 5 o'clock in the evening and set to open a little before 9 o'clock in the morning It is a general impression that an expert burglar can open a combination lock by listening to the clicking sounds, but dealers say it is not possible for any one to do it. If a safe owner forgets his combination, the safe has to be bored into There is no other way of opening it.—Chicago Record.

The Next Best Thing.

The robber presented his glittering pistol.

"Have you a vacancy in your bookkeeping staff?" he demanded

The president of the bank shook his head.

"Well," the outlaw sighed — he was palpably chagrined—"I'll have to be contented, then, with what cash you have on hand
